

WASHINGTON (December 13) – Congressman Spencer Bachus (AL-6) today said that he agrees with a federal court ruling that declared President Obama’s health care law unconstitutional and believes the issue should be sent to the U.S. Supreme Court for final resolution.

Bachus will sign a letter to U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder seeking an expedited review of a ruling that struck down the law’s mandate that individuals purchase government-approved health insurance.

Today’s ruling by a federal judge in Virginia is the latest legal blow to the government takeover of health care passed by the Democrat majority in Congress at the President’s urging. Bachus has joined an amicus brief filed in a Florida case that is also challenging the law.

“It was my belief from the start that the health care takeover was unconstitutional at its core. The strong legal case should be presented to the U.S. Supreme Court as soon as possible. As I have long said, the best course of action is to vacate the law and replace it with common sense reforms that respect our Constitution,” Bachus said.

Bachus voted against the health care bill in March, citing among many disturbing factors its unconstitutional provisions and funding of abortion services.
